

Save Kisses for Home

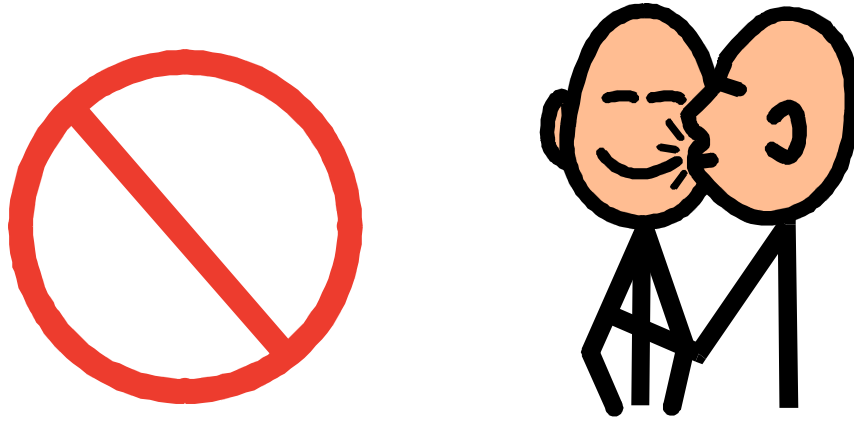

When we are in school, we need to always try our best to respect other people's space.

Pretend that your friends have a circle around them. This is called their personal space. Some students feel very uncomfortable if you stand too close to them.

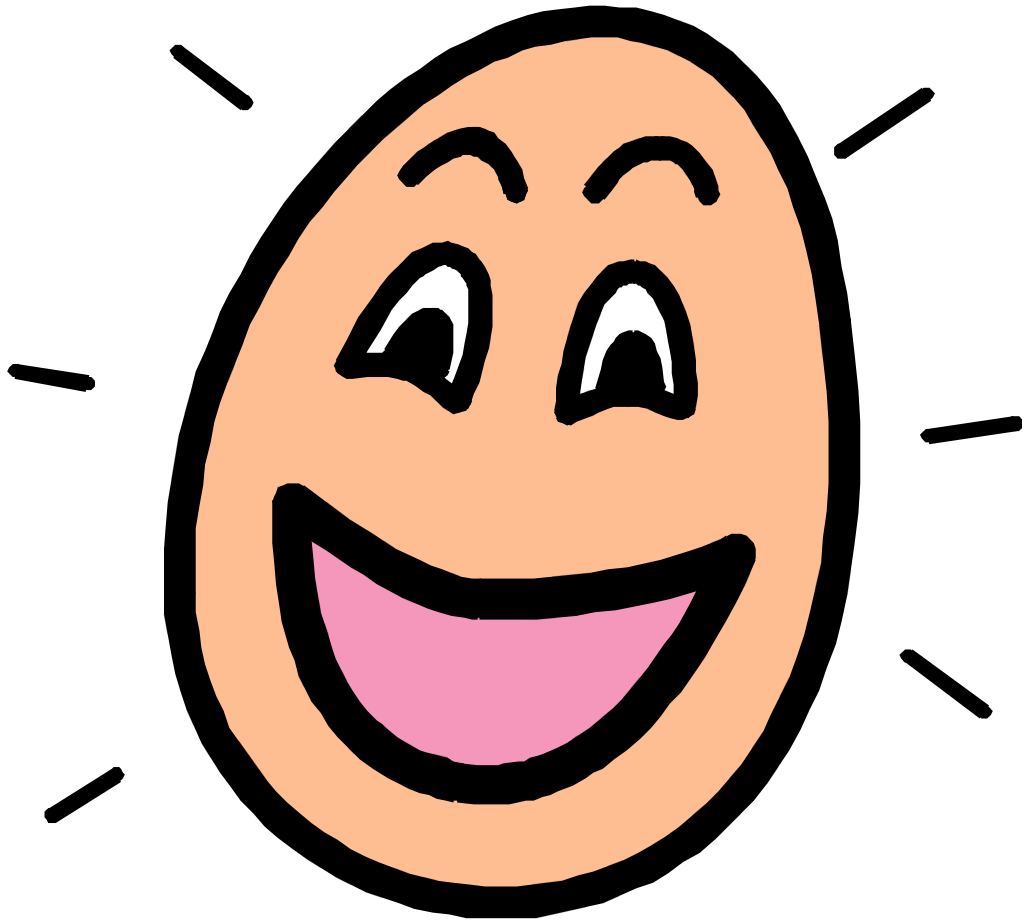

Sometimes we want to show our friends how much we like them. Shaking a friend's hand or patting them on the back shows them you like them. Sharing your toys or materials also shows someone that you like them.

It is not appropriate to show our friends that we like them by kissing them in school. This might make your friend feel weird or scared.

Just try and remember when it is appropriate to enter someone's personal space. Think about a time when it okay to enter someone's space. Now think of a time when entering someone's space might make them feel nervous.

All of our friends at school will be happy if we try and respect each other.
