

On the Rug at School!

By Gretchen Mills ECSE Para- Lincoln, NE

I am in kindergarten now!

I am learning it is never okay to be disruptive.
Being disruptive means not keeping my hands and feet to myself, talking when the teacher is talking, and some other things that we will learn about too.

It is never okay to be disruptive is on the rug.
I sit with my friends on the rug and listen to my teacher.

Sometimes we have other adults in the room. "Adults" is a fancy word for "grown-ups."

At school, adults, or grown-ups, are in charge.

I sit with my friends and listen to adults on the rug.

I sit criss-cross applesauce. My hands are in my lap. My voice is off. That means NO TALKING.

My eyes are on the teacher.

If I want to talk, I raise my hand.

This is what our bodies look like on the rug!

Sometimes the teacher or adult will not call my name to talk.

That's OKAY. I can follow the rules of the rug, even though I am mad or sad the teacher didn't call my name to talk.

It will be my turn to talk another time!

Following the rules of the rug helps me and my friends learn at school!
